Closing Remarks

Guest Speaker

Dr. Sunil Budhrani, MD (C`95)

Emergency Medicine Physician and Clinical Associate Professor of Emergency Medicine, George Washington University School of Medicine

Dr. Budhrani is a board-certified emergency medicine physician and clinical associate professor of Emergency Medicine at George Washington School of Medicine in Washington, DC. He serves on the Employer Advisory Board for Penn LPS Online and has been a guest lecturer for classes at the Wharton School and Perelman School of Medicine. "My passions are healthcare and education," says Dr. Budhrani of his continued involvement at Penn. "I value all those places that gave me tools to be successful going forward. Penn had a profound impact on my trajectory."

Dr. Budhrani graduated with honors from the University of Pennsylvania with a Bachelor of Arts degree in biological basis of behavior and double minors in English and chemistry. He credits his interdisciplinary undergraduate studies and extracurricular activities, such as lacrosse and serving as a resident assistant, with developing the leadership and problem-solving skills that have benefited his career. "Studying English made me better able to think outside of the box and look at viewpoints in a different way," reflects Dr. Budhrani. "It also made me a better communicator. I have been able to translate difficult subjects in science and medicine into something people can better understand."

Dr. Budhrani recently served as the chief executive officer of Innovation Health, a first of its kind payer-provider partnership between CVS-Aetna and one of the largest health systems in the Washington DC Metropolitan Area, INOVA Health System. In addition to his roles in the hospital settings, Dr. Budhrani also founded one of the first national end-to-end telemedicine solutions companies, CareClix Telemedicine, and prior to that, a regional urgent care system, PrimeMed Urgent Care Systems, which operated urgent care facilities throughout the metropolitan Washington, DC area. He also served as the first Chief Medical Officer of the Affordable Care Act health plan, Evergreen Health Care, for the State of Maryland. His medical degree and Master of Public Health are from The George Washington University, where he was a 2021 recipient of the School's Distinguished Alumni Award for his exemplary service during the pandemic. He completed his residency training in emergency medicine at the Tufts University School of Medicine in Massachusetts.

The College of Liberal and Professional Studies

The University of Pennsylvania's founder, Benjamin Franklin, knew the importance of education. At the age of 10, in 1716, his formal education ended when his father took him out of school to become a chandler's apprentice, learning to make soap and candles. Young Ben disliked the work and eventually was apprenticed as a printer to his brother James, who brought a printing press from England.

While he learned the printing trade, Franklin borrowed books from the apprentice booksellers he came to know in Boston, his hometown. He was known to skip meals in order to buy books of his own. He taught himself not only grammar, arithmetic, and history, but several foreign languages, which served him well in his later years when he represented the fledgling United States government as ambassador to France.

The student of today who has had to interrupt, or never had the chance to begin, a college education—or who seeks further study in professional master's programs—has the option of earning an Ivy League degree through the University of Pennsylvania's College of Liberal and Professional Studies.

Whatever the level of their studies, our students are intellectually capable adults who are fully engaged in their work, and for whom a Penn degree serves two fully integrated aims: intellectual and personal enrichment as well as career and academic advancement. Our students come to Penn with a sense of purpose and urgency and a strong sense of the problems facing the world in the 21st century. They bring to Penn a unique combination of intellectual talent, maturity, and a broad spectrum of experience.

We like to think that a self-starter like Ben Franklin would be proud of the programs offered by his University's College of Liberal and Professional Studies. And we're quite sure that he would be proud of what each and every new graduate here today has achieved.

As final action cannot always be taken by the time this program goes to press, these lists of degree and prize recipients are tentative only. The appearance of a name in this program should not be construed as an indication that the person has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania. Conversely, the absence of a student's name herein does not necessarily mean that the person has not been awarded a Penn degree. The student's transcript is the official record of the University.
